

AWARDED BY THE PORTUGUESE MAGAZINE EXAME FOR THE FOURTH
TIME IN FIVE YEARS

REPSOL SELECTED AS THE BEST FUEL DISTRIBUTION COMPANY IN PORTUGAL

Repsol has been selected as the best fuel distribution company in Portugal. This award was granted by the Portuguese magazine Exame, which in its annual "The 500 biggest and best" issue, acknowledged the successes reaped by the company and its consolidation as leader in the LPG business. The fuel distribution sector is the most important sector in terms of sales according to Exame 500.

This award, which the company has received for the fourth time now in five years, serves to consolidate Repsol's position in the country in which it has gained the satisfaction of its clients, constant innovation of its products and services, cost rationalisation while always maintaining our high safety and quality standards in all our operations.

Thanks to the efforts that Repsol has made over the years, it has managed to position itself as one of the best energy companies in the country.

Repsol in Portugal

Repsol is the biggest chemical company in Portugal, with 437 employees in this sector. In its petrochemical complex in Sines, it produces olefin and polyolefins, of which it is the sole producer in the country.

With regard to the LPG business, it operates in the importation, storage and distribution of this fuel and sells butane and propane gas in districts all over Portugal through a network of more than 10,000 resellers. Repsol has its own installations in Matosinhos and in the Banática terminal, in the port of Lisbon.

The company also sells fuels, lubricants and specialities via service stations or direct sales to important clients in the aviation and marine sectors. With 421 service stations, it is present in all the districts and directly employs 237 workers, in addition to the 461 employees working in company operated service stations.

More information about Repsol in Portugal

Repsol's Director of LPG Portugal, Antonio Valcárcel (left) receiving the award which accredits the company as the best fuel distribution company in Portugal